AN EXPLANATION.

People sometimes doubt the truth of advertisements. To this we answer that in our case we can prove by the experience of customers who have priced these goods at former prices that every reduction is real. If you ask why we should mark down the very goods now most in demand, we answer that we want to at once get a crowd in our new Cloak Department. For this purpose, nothing is so effective as a real live sale; hence our reductions are beneficial.

THOMAS A. HENDRICKS.

DEATH OF THE VICE-PRESIDENT.

The Old Indiana Statesman has died at his home in Indianapolis. Death of His Long and Successful Career—How the News Is Received Everywhere.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 25.—Vice-President Hendricks died very suddenly at his residence a few minutes before 5 o'clock this afternoon. He came home from Chicago early in the week and complained of feeling unwell, but nothing serious was thought of at the time. Last night he was Mrs. Hendricks attended the reception at the residence of John J. Conner, and again complained of feeling unwell. The physician he was no better and the family physician, Dr. Thompson, was called in. He gave him an emetic and sent him to bed in his office. Mr. Hendricks stayed in his room all day, and the most of the time in bed, although he got up at frequent intervals to receive visitors, and about 5 o'clock this evening he was in a chair for a few minutes in the parlor. He was delayed longer than she expected, and when she returned to the room she found that Mr. Hendricks was dead. End of a busy and eventful life had come to an abrupt termination. His last words were, "There was no indication of pain or suffering, and his eyes were only half closed as if in a gentle sleep." His death of paralysis of the brain.

Biographies.

The intelligence above conveyed will at once stir up sadness in the country, for Mr. Hendricks was a man that commanded the尊重 and confidence of all in all parties.

He was born near Zanesville, Ohio, September 7, 1819, and was 6 months old when his family removed to Indiana, settling at Madison. His father was less an arm in service, having removed from the position of major general at Philadelphia without, so far as we know, any just cause, and it behoves us to add the reason.

Six feet, 5 1/2 inches. Army of the public, of Pennsylvania, was removed upon the following for presenting to your Excellency.

Major General Henry S. Halleck, successor of this post, Union soldier who lost an arm in service, having removed from the position of major general at Philadelphia without, so far as we know, any just cause, and it behoves us to add the reason.

Mr. Hendricks was a speaker, he became a general favorite. In 1850, during his re-election, he was called prominently before a constitutional convention, in which were Colfax and Holmes, and he was soon thereafter appointed to the command of the military division. In 1851 he was given a seat in Congress from the central district of the State. Much to the dissatisfaction of his constituents, he voted for the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and was beaten in 1854 in his efforts for re-election. The popularly acclaimed law was still in the middle of the following year, when he was called by President Pierce, on the post of commissioner of the general land office. This he retained in 1859. In 1860 he was nominated for governor.

NOMINATED FOR GOVERNOR.—With Mr. Tilden for the presidency, the history of which contest will be shown in another article, he was elected in 1861, and he was chosen in 1862, despite the opposition of his colleagues. He was having experience against him before the practice of the law. In 1872 he was chosen governor by co-operation with the commissioners of the state, in support of the national law, and he was chosen in 1873, and he can be proud of his name, all the other states having elected being Republicans. In 1876 he was nominated for the vice-presidency.

LAST YEAR Mr. Hendricks was presented as a candidate for the presidency before the Democratic convention at Denver, Cleveland being nominated, he was put immediately in nomination for the vice-presidency by the delegation from Indiana. He was then elected to the position, it was now the party's choice to nominate him for the vice-president.

Four years—Whether removal of our friends without cause or crime in politics is an inexcusable punishment, and in the midst of great social business, is not a moral infamy, or a violation of a state's rights?

The spirit of removal is aggravated by the substitution of one who was not a soldier. This adds to the removal contained in the removal without cause, the adding of discrimination against my soldier. It is not thought that your national guard would be willing to appear now to be so the soldier element. They want to have the rights conveyed in public prominence, conferred by law, and demanded by liberal public sentiment. More they do not ask.

Very respectfully submitted by order of the post. [Signed] ALEXANDER STEPHEN DAVID F. WEAVER, Adjutant.

McPherson's Matters

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Secretary Whitney has made arrangements to deliver Thanksgiving turkeys to any officer or employee of the navy department who will visit Washington.

Owing to the fact that tomorrow will be public holiday the cabinet will not meet.

The supreme court of the district on Saturday noon—day denied the motion of Lester Harrison for writ of habeas corpus to compel the release of the Interim. It recognises an attorney in private cases before the department.

Mr. Harrison had been an assistant commissioner of the land office, and under the recent order of Secretary Lincoln was directed to appear before the department when he severed his connection with it. The motion was denied on the ground that the secretary has power to regulate the practice before the department without legal interference.

PERSONALLY AND SOCIALLY.—

Mr. Hendricks was all that a person could desire, and in his personal life, he has lived without reproach. He was married without wealth, in 1836 to Eliza C. Morgan, of Cincinnati. She is in lady of distinguished appearance, and popularity. She is a Mississippian, and has been a member of the Presbyterian church, Mr. Hendricks' mother, Mrs. Anna P. Hendricks, Epworth L. church in Indianapolis, in 1852, and has been since then one of its most prominent members.
